In the recent debate in the House of Com mons on bimetallism Sir Lyon PLAYFAIR

said:--"Those who opposed bimetallism denied that trade depended upon metal lic currency. Trade rested upon barter." This is a favourite argument with monometallists and has become quite heary in their service. Of course trade rests upon barter, in the ultimate resort. but the barter is facilitated by currency, which is as important a factor in international as in domestic trade. When the currency of a country becomes disorganised there is an immediate convulsion in its trade So with the world's currency. While one half of the world uses gold only as its stand. ard and the half silver, without any settled ratio between them, international trade can never attain to the same sound position and achieve the same development that it would if favoured by a stable currency recognised by all countries alike. The barter on which international trade ultimately rests is not direct, but indirect. The tea grower in China is not paid directly in piece goods, but in a medium of exchange with which he may buy piece goods if he wants them. But unless this medium of exchange is accredited by all parties concerned there must necesoperate in the restriction of trade. And this is eractly what takes place. Capitalists in Europe are afraid to send their money out to traders in the East have to proceed with ex- total loss. treme caution in placing orders in Europe lest by a fall in exchange the silver price - Facts are stronger than arguments. The American silver prospects seem to govern the tone of the market more than anything else for the present, and were the uncertainty on this subject less than has been of late, buyers of goods would probably operate more freely. These state-HONGKONG LRADING ments speak for themselves. Either the Times' facts or the Times' arguments must be wrong. Both cannot be right. I hold to the facts, and maintain that they fully support the contentions of the bimetallists.

A raw evenings ago there appeared in the columns of the China Mail a review of the Whether the spmewhat gloom view taken of the prospects of that undertaking be justified or not we must leave time to tell. We do not refer to the articl for the purpose either of confuting or supporting the criticism on the Societé—which is written in an apparently fair and temperate spirit—but to examine a statement of general interest bearing on the future of the Colony. We are told that "unless by the help of disconnected. Inspector Mathieson said the Charles William Olliver, seaman, said—I was This important Sale commences on Tuesday, cheap coal we are able to start manufactor alv 1st. For further narticulars see future future development of the Colony." In the present state of affairs possimism is in the would be necessary to hear their evidence, he galley instead of on deck" and complainant ascendant, but looking at the matter dispassionately and calmly, is there any more justification for such a statement now than there was twenty years ago? We are told that for several years past the foreign trade of China has been standing still. In 1870 the total value of the trade recorded by the Foreign Customs was in round numbers Hk. Tls._119,000,000; last year it was, excluding the Kowloon and Lappa stations, Hk. Tis. 175,000,000, showing an increase of nearly 50 per cent. In the same period is replete with the best Machinery, embodying the shipping entered at Hongkong has increased from 2,800,000 tons to 6,200,000, an increase of over 120 per cent. It is on its shipping that Hongkong is chiefly dependsupply, to secure which we have added a Content, and, as the above figures show, the growth of the shipping trade has far outposition to compete in quality with the best stripped the growth of the foreign trade of China. For the fourth time in the last twenty years it is now, however, on the down grade. In 1873 and 1874 there was a fall ing off, after which there was a steady rise until 1879, when there was another The figures then rose steadily until 1884, which year showed a decline. In the years 1885-87 there whonever practicable, are despatched by first was an increase; in 1888 the trade remained almost stationary, and last year showed a decline of 200,000 tons. It is to fendant and asked him tor his wages. The cereals, millets, sorghums, the banana, or soy. be feared that the present year will show a further decline, and it would be hazardous to prophesy any improvement for the following year, but that the trade will in time recover from the present as it has from previous depressions there can be no doubt. The fact that China's foreign trade has for some years been stationary affords all the more reason for believing that the recovery in that also cannot be far distant, for it is impossible to conceive that the trade should up in the morning. Witness left at half-past one hundred to several hundred times as much those of Emin. In reply to a question put to remain stationary for ever. We were under the impression it had been a flourishing emportum for well-nigh fifty years, but if we have not yet arrived at that dignity we have no doubt we will go on progressing towards Plaintiff's leaving caused him great incomit at something like the same rate that we have done hitherto. If cheap coal comes, as we hope it will, then of course manufactures will speedily spring up and the progress of the past will be insignificant as compared with the progress of the future. But apart from possibilities in that direction, the native industries of the Colony are increasing from year to year; work which was formerly sent to Canton to be executed, such, for in- stealing his master's gold watch, value 3125, or stance, as silversmiths work, is now performed on the spot; firms which formerly had only a branch house in Hongkong are had now been recovered. making it their head quarters; and the general population of the Colony is steadily increasing. It would be absurd, however, to expect that the Colony should never experience periods of depression; it is no less absurd, when such a period comes, to suppose that the Colony has come to a full stop,

Even civilized man himself, as Mr. C. H. Allen suggests, is at the present day largely the result of invention. All advance from primitive barbarism must be passed to the credit of invention. Compare the best specimens of pure-blooded Afro-Americans with the best of the stock from which they came six generations ago, and a hint is had of what ages of progress have done for other branches of the human family. The various divisions of the canine family are as unlike their progenitors of the early ages as the electric light of 1890 is unlike the lamps with which the patriarcha illuminated their tents. The trotting horse is an invention, and so is his sturdy brother of the cart. All domestic animals and fowls have been changed in structure, in colour, in adaptation to various uses, and in many other respects, by intelligent attention to the principle of selection in reproduction. The ugly weed of the field becomes a beautiful and fragrant flower of the garden or conservatory. The unregarded root or seed of the wilderness becomes a great factor in the sustenance of human life and a staple of commerce. According to a telegram from Rome, after four years of steady work, a Roman architect, Signor Carlini, has just finished plans for a structure which is a park and opera house combined, so that horses and carriages, may reach the door of every private box or may be driven imong the fountains and stately gardens on the roof. The architect proposes to lay his designs before the officials having charge of the new World's Fair of America. The whole work can be carried out in Italy, at a cost of £480,000, but the difference in the price of labour and materia in the western continent will swell the aggregate 50,000 people, and comfortably seat 30,000.

The Rev. O. W. Fontherston tells this :-was puzzled by a Tennessee lady about her marriage. Sitting by her n a parlour and wishing to introduce conversation. I asked her. 'Are you n marriel or single lady?' She replied, 'I am only half married, and remained as silent as before. This stumped me. I had never heard of such a case before. She saw she had excited half married? I don't understand it.' She replied f If you must know the truth about it. I have gained my own consent to marry, and when the other half of the couple to make the mutch gives his consent we will have a wedding."

NOW ON SALE IMPERIAL QUARTÓ NGLISH AND CHINESE DICTIONARY WITH THE PUNTI AND MANDARIN PRONUNCIATION.

An Anglo-Chinese Dictionary, published at the Daily Press Office. Hongkons For comprehensiveness and practical service this Work stands unrivalled. All the new words which the Chinese have of late years been compelled to coin to express the numerous objects in machinery, photography, telegraphy, and in science generally, which the rapid advance 1292 of foreign relations has imposed upon them, are here given in extenso. Each and every word is fully illustrated and explained, forming exercises for students of a most instructive nature. Both the Court and Punti pronunciations are given the accents being carefully marked on the best their Bills of Lading to the Undersigned for | principle hitherto attained. To illustrate the vast scope of the work the following facts are submitted for consideration :— Chalmers' Yocabulary contains about 16,000 Chinese characters, and Medhurst's English and Chinese Dictionary about 100,000, whilst this work contains more than 50,000 English words, and upwards of 600,000 Chinese characters. Again, despite all the grammars and other elementary works as yet published, the student of this difficult language absolutely requires examples to display the various appli-cations and equivalents of different words which have one general meaning. Of these examples this work contains more than five times as many as any other Dictionary hitherto pub-
